Watch the video below to see how the Casper Mattress performed when put to the test in our lab. Mattress Performance Casper Casper Hybrid Casper Mattress Coupon Save 10% off your cart with code SF10 Sleeping Style and Body Weight Casper Sleeper Type Under 130 lbs 130-230 lbs Above 230 lbs Side Sleepers Back Sleepers Stomach Sleepers

Side Sleepers: The Casper Mattress's close conforming and pressure relief may make it exceptionally well suited to side sleeping. Its comfort system's layer of polyfoam and layer of memory foam contour to the side sleeper's body to provide a pressure-relieving hug. The zoned layer is crafted to prevent the sleeper's hips from sinking in too deeply, which could help promote better spinal alignment for side sleepers. Due to its medium feel, the Casper is especially appropriate for sleepers under 230 pounds. Most side sleepers who weigh under 230 pounds will likely experience an exceptional balance between contouring and support. Side sleepers over 230 pounds may not find the Casper as comfortable since individuals in this weight group usually prefer a firmer mattress. The Casper's medium feel may allow heavier individuals to sink in too deeply and cause the foam to over compress near their hips and shoulders, leading to spinal mis-alignment. Back Sleepers: Back sleepers often prefer a medium to medium firm feel. This is because they usually need an even surface that doesn't sag to keep their spines aligned, but they also frequently enjoy some cushioning. As a medium mattress, the Casper is on the softer end of the range back sleepers tend to prefer. Back sleepers who weigh under 230 pounds and who favor a softer feel may enjoy the Casper Mattress. The two comfort layers cradle the sleeper and can relieve pressure points. Since the memory foam layer is zoned to provide more support near the hips, it should prevent lighter back sleepers' midsections from sinking in excessively. Individuals who weigh over 230 pounds usually require a firmer mattress to provide the ideal balance between cushioning and support. Since the Casper Mattress has a medium feel, it might not be firm enough to prevent a heavier back sleeper from sinking in too deeply around their hips. This could create pressure points and put their spine out of alignment. Stomach Sleepers: Many individuals carry more weight around their midsections. Because of this, stomach sleepers usually require a mattress with enough support to prevent their hips from sinking in too deeply. Excessive sinkage could lead to improper alignment and put more strain on the sleeper's spine. The Casper's zoned layer provides extra support around the sleeper's midsection, which may be helpful for stomach sleepers. However, the mattress's medium feel may not offer enough support for some stomach sleepers, especially those who weigh over 230 pounds. Casper Hybrid Sleeper Type Under 130 lbs 130-230 lbs Above 230 lbs Side Sleepers Back Sleepers Stomach Sleepers Side Sleepers: Like the Casper Mattress, the Casper Hybrid is particularly appropriate for side sleepers who weigh under 230 pounds. The Casper Hybrid uses the same comfort system as the Casper Mattress. A top layer of polyfoam conforms to a side sleeper's body, while a layer of memory foam provides deeper contouring. The memory foam layer prevents the sleeper from sinking in against the coil core, and it is also zoned with extra support near the sleeper's midsection. This zoning can promote better spinal alignment by providing support where it is needed most. The medium feel is soft enough to allow side sleepers under 230 pounds to sink in and enjoy good pressure relief. However, it should also be supportive enough to promote good spinal alignment for most individuals in this weight group. Because heavier individuals generally require more support the Casper Hybrid's medium feel may be too soft for some side sleepers who weigh over 230 pounds. Back Sleepers: Back sleepers usually look for an even mattress that doesn't sag in order to support proper spinal alignment. To achieve this, many back sleepers prefer a medium or medium firm feel. Some cushioning may also be comfortable for back sleepers, particularly those who enjoy a plush feel. The Casper Hybrid's medium feel is on the soft end of the range most back sleepers prefer. This may make it best suited to back sleepers who weigh under 130 pounds. Since these sleepers do not exert as much force on the mattress, the medium feel is likely to feel somewhat firmer to them. The Casper Hybrid's medium feel should be able to give the sleeper an excellent balance of cushioning and support. Back sleepers between 130 and 230 pounds may experience deeper cradling from the Casper Hybrid. Individuals from this group will likely sink in more deeply, but the zoned transition layer should prevent their hips from sinking in excessively, thereby promoting better spinal alignment. While the zoned transition layer provides extra support around the sleeper's hips, back sleepers over 230 pounds may still find that their midsections sink in excessively due to the mattress's medium feel. This could put a strain on the sleeper's spine. Stomach Sleepers: The Casper Hybrid's close conforming comfort layers coupled with its medium feel may allow a stomach sleeper's midsection to sink in too far, which could put a strain on their spine. While the zoned layer can mitigate this issue to an extent, some stomach sleepers will feel the Casper Hybrid is softer than ideal. Stomach sleepers under 130 pounds may experience good support and cushioning from the Casper Hybrid. Stomach sleepers over 130 pounds may experience more significant sinkage, which could make it difficult to maintain proper spinal alignment. However, the Casper Hybrid's coil core may provide more support for stomach sleepers over 230 pounds than the Casper's polyfoam core. Casper Mattress Review Breakdown Both the Casper Original and the Original Hybrid have a medium feel, rating around 5 on the 10-point firmness scale. At 11 inches thick, these models are slightly thicker than the average mattress. Apart from the support core, the Casper and the Casper Hybrid are constructed similarly. The mattress cover is made using a variety of materials, including cotton, lycra, rayon, and recycled polyester. As a result, each mattress cover is made from a number of recycled bottles converted into a fabric. The cover is not designed to be machine-washable, but it can be gently spot cleaned with a mild detergent. The two-part comfort system starts with a 1.5-inch layer of perforated polyfoam. This material is more breathable and responsive than most memory foam, giving the surface of the bed extra cooling and a slight bounce. The next layer is composed of zoned memory foam that provides targeted support to different areas of the body, with more firmness around the hips and waist. The Casper Mattress's core is constructed of a durable, high-density polyfoam that stabilizes the mattress surface. The Casper Hybrid's core uses 7 inches of pocketed coils encased in polyfoam. Pocketed coils give the bed extra bounce, breathability, and edge support without transferring excessive motion, while the polyfoam supports the coils. Casper Mattress The Casper Mattress is an all-foam model constructed of three layers: a top layer of perforated foam, a layer of zoned memory foam, and a base of high-density polyfoam. Recycled Polyester / Polyester / Upcycled Cotton / Rayon / Lycra 1.5" Perforated Polyfoam 2" Tri-Zoned Memory Foam Casper Hybrid The Casper Hybrid uses most of the same materials as the Casper Mattress, including the two-layer comfort system with polyfoam and memory foam. Its support core uses pocketed coils encased in polyfoam, setting it apart from the Casper Mattress. Recycled Polyester / Polyester / Upcycled Cotton / Rayon / Lycra 1.5" Perforated Polyfoam 2" Tri-Zoned Memory Foam 7" Pocketed Coils encased in polyfoam Mattress Prices and Sizing Compared to other all-foam mattresses, the Casper Original's price is close to average. The Casper Original Hybrid comes in at a lower price point than average for quality hybrid models, making it a strong option for budget-minded shoppers. Casper also has frequent promotions that can help customers save additional money off the list price. The Casper Original and Casper Original Hybrid are available in all standard mattress sizes. Casper Mattress Casper Hybrid Save 10% off your cart with code SF10 Trial, Warranty, and Shipping Policies The Casper and Casper Hybrid are sold through the Casper website, Amazon, brick-and-mortar Casper Sleep Shop locations across the United States, and retail partners, including Target.
